PUBLIC SAFETY CORNER

As spring is in full force and summer is almost upon us, residents may notice that coyotes, mountain lions, and snakes are out and about. The following information is from Los Angeles County Animal Control and the California Department of Fish and Wildlife on ways to make your property less attractive to wildlife. Mountain lions and coyotes are often attracted to urban/suburban situations by easy prey such as domestic pets/animals and deer that live in these areas. Younger mountain lions, dispersing from fully occupied mountain lion habitat, may also end up in these areas, trying to establish their own territories. Bright lights, strobe lights, loud music or other recordings, barking dogs and moveable scarecrows in depredation areas may help repel mountain lions. To decrease the attractiveness of your property to mountain lions, everything should be done to discourage potential prey animals, particularly deer, from living on your property or nearby. This includes landscaping with plants not attractive to deer, removing dense or low-lying vegetation that could hide a mountain lion or provide habitat for other potential prey species, and not feeding wildlife to attract them.

Aggressive coyote behavior should be reported immediately to the City's Planning Department by calling 818-706-1613. If you see an aggressive mountain lion or fear for your life, please call 9-1-1. To report a sighting please call the California Department of Fish and Wildlife at 916-445-0045. For snake removal, residents should call the fire station at 818-889-1626. For more helpful tips and additional information about living with wildlife, please visit the City's website www.wlv.org and search "Animal Control."

LIVING WITH WILDLIFE

The California Department of Fish and Wildlife has published a brochure titled "Living with California Mountain Lions" which suggests the following if you encounter a mountain lion:

1. Don't hike alone: Go in groups, with adults supervising children.
2. Keep children close to you: observations of captured wild mountain lions reveal that the animals seem especially drawn to children. Keep children within your sight at all times.
3. Do not approach a mountain lion: most mountain lions will try to avoid a confrontation. Give them a way to escape.
4. Do not run from a mountain lion: running may stimulate a mountain lion's instinct to chase. Instead, stand and face the animal. Make eye contact. If you have small children with you, pick them up if possible so they don't panic and run. Although it may be awkward, pick them up without bending over or turning away from the mountain lion.
5. Do not crouch down or bend over: in Nepal, a researcher studying tigers and leopards watched the big cats kill cattle and domestic water buffalo while ignoring humans standing nearby. He surmised that a human standing up is just not the right shape for a cat's prey. On the other hand, a person squatting or bending over looks a lot like a four-legged prey animal. If you are in mountain lion country, avoid squatting, crouching or bending over.
6. Do all you can to appear larger: raise your arms; open your jacket if you are wearing one; pick up small children; throw stones, branches or whatever you can reach without crouching or turning your back; wave your arm slowly and speak firmly in a loud voice. The idea is to convince the mountain lion that you are not prey and that you may be a danger to it.
